(3) The Authority may carry out situation testing to verify compliance with the principle of equal treatment; in the course of such testing, it puts persons who differ in a characteristic specified in section 8, but are otherwise similar, in identical positions with regard to the conduct, measure, criterion, omission, instruction, or practice (hereinafter jointly “practice”) of the investigated person, and examines the practice of the investigated person from the perspective of compliance with the principle of equal treatment.

(5) If, in the course of the proceedings, a person who does not have a home address, place of residence, or contact address at the seat of the Authority needs to be heard, he shall be summoned by the Authority to the seat of the mayor's office of the local government where that person lives or customarily resides. The Authority shall hear the summoned person at the venue indicated in the summons. If a person who does not have a home address, place of residence, or contact address resides customarily in the capital, he shall be summoned to or heard at the seat of the Authority.

(6) If, in the course of the proceedings, the Authority holds a hearing, the persons to be heard shall be summoned to the seat of the mayor's office of the local government or, in the capital, the district local government where the applicant has his home address or seat, unless the circumstances do not permit the hearing to be held at that mayor's office. In such a case, the hearing shall be held at the seat of the mayor's office of the local government or, in the capital, the district local government which the Authority considers to be most easily accessible from the applicant's home address and which is capable of providing the conditions necessary for the hearing.

(7) The hearings of the Authority shall be public. The Authority may, by means of a procedural decision, ban the public from the entire hearing or any part thereof if doing so is indispensable for the protection of classified data, trade secrets, or other secrets specified in a separate Act.

(8) The Authority may also ban the public to protect public morality, or at the request of the party, if doing so is justified by the protection of the party's personality rights.

(9) If the investigated person is, pursuant to paragraphs (5) and (6),

(10) If applying the provisions laid down in paragraphs (5), (6), and (9) would be disproportionately difficult or cause unjustified delay in the proceeding, the Authority may also summon the person to be heard to the seat of the Authority, while reimbursing him for the costs of appearance.

(11) to (12)

(13) The Authority shall attempt to facilitate a settlement before making a decision.

(17) Before closing the hearing, the Authority shall warn the parties about the closing of the hearing, and it shall ask them if they wish to make any further statements.

Legal consequences for violations of the principle of equal treatment

Section 17 An authority proceeding may be instituted to investigate the observance of the principle of equal treatment within one year after the violation became known if three years have not passed since the violation took place.

Section 17/A (1) If the Authority establishes the violation of the principle of equal treatment, it

- a) may order the unlawful situation to be ended,
- b) may prohibit the unlawful conduct for the future,
- c) may order its final and binding decision to be published as data accessible on public interest grounds in a de-identified manner apart from any accessible data of the infringer,
- d) may impose a fine,
- e) may apply a legal consequence specified in a separate Act.

(2) For the purposes of paragraph (1) c), data accessible on public interest grounds means the natural identification data and home address of a natural person infringer, and the name and seat of an infringer that is a legal person or an organisation without legal personality.

(3) The legal consequences specified in paragraph (1) shall be determined with regard to all circumstances of the case, in particular the group of aggrieved persons, the reversibility of the harm caused by the violation, the duration of the unlawful situation, the repetition or frequency of the unlawful conduct, the economic significance of the infringer, and the supportive and cooperative behaviour of the infringer as regards the proceeding.

(4) The legal consequences specified in paragraph (1) may also be applied jointly.

(5) The amount of the fine shall range from fifty thousand to six million forints.

(6) If the Authority establishes that an employer who was required to adopt an equal opportunities plan failed to do so, it shall invite the employer to rectify the omission, and it may apply the legal consequences specified in paragraph (1) c) to e) while applying paragraphs (3) to (4) accordingly.

(7) A proceeding for determining the amount of a fine to be imposed for the violation of a provision implementing the principle of equal treatment may be launched within three months after the Authority becomes aware of the violation, and in any event within one year after the violation has taken place. If the violating conduct or situation is continuous, the time limit shall be calculated from the termination thereof.

Section 17/B (1)

(2) A decision taken by the Authority in a pending proceeding relating to a violation of the principle of equal treatment may not be amended or annulled by exercising supervisory powers.

(3)

Section 17/C (1) With a view to facilitating the use of data concerning compliance with the principle of equal treatment in the proceedings of other organs, the Authority shall keep an official register containing the data of employers who violated the principle of equal treatment as established by the Authority in an enforceable decision with administrative finality or, if the decision was subject to an administrative court action, by a court in a final and binding decision.

(2) The register referred to in paragraph (1) shall contain the following:

a) the name, seat, and tax number of the employer, or, if the employer is a natural person without a tax number, the name, home address, and tax identifier of the employer,

c) a description of the violation,

d) the legal consequence applied, its extent, and reference to the legal provision serving as basis for the legal consequence,

e) if the decision was subject to an administrative court action, the date and number of the final and binding, and enforceable court decision, the date when it became final and binding, and if the court's decision annulled the challenged administrative decision, or annulled it while ordering a new proceeding, or dismissed the action.

(3) Data in the official register shall be processed by the Authority in its own information system. All data mentioned in paragraph (2) shall be entered by the Authority in the information database on the day when the decision establishing the violation reaches administrative finality and becomes enforceable or, if the administrative decision was subject to an administrative court action, on the next working day after the decision of the court becomes known.

(4) Data recorded in the register, or made available to the public on the website based on the register, shall be erased by the Authority two years after the underlying decision becomes final and binding or the underlying decision reaches administrative finality and becomes enforceable.

Section 17/D§ (1) Subject to the derogation set out in paragraph (3), the Authority shall, from the register kept by it, make available to the public the data mentioned in section 17/C (2) a) to d) concerning employers who were subject to fine, imposed by an enforceable administrative decision with administrative finality or, if that decision was subject to an administrative court action, by the court decision, within two years for the repeated commission of an identical violation, as well as the data mentioned in section 17/C (2) e) if the administrative decision was subject to an administrative court action and the court dismissed the action or amended the administrative decision, by publishing them on its website as soon as the repeated commission of a violation identical to the previous one within two years is established in an enforceable administrative decision with administrative finality, in accordance with the law.

(2) For the purposes of paragraph (1) and with regard to employers having more than one establishment, repeated commission of an identical violation shall be construed to refer to an identical violation established, at the same establishment, within a period of two years in an enforceable decision with administrative finality.

(3) If the Authority becomes aware of an administrative court action brought against its decision,

a) it shall publish the data mentioned in paragraphs (1) and (2) with due regard to the final and binding, and enforceable court decision,

b) it shall arrange for the erasure of the data made available to the public on its website, in so far as the data mentioned in paragraphs (1) and (2) have already been made available.

(4) The registration and publication obligation of the Authority shall not be affected by the performance of any obligation, provided for by an administrative decision with administrative finality or by an administrative decision subject to a final and binding court decision, by the employer concerned within the time limit or on the due date set.

Special rules on data processing

Section 17/E (1)

(2) The investigated person shall, upon request, make available all documents and data stored on an electronic data-storage medium relating to the case, and he shall ensure that all facts, circumstances, and other conditions be accessible as necessary to investigate any violation of the principle of equal treatment. The investigated person may not be required to produce any record or summary he is not required by law to keep, provided that disproportionate effort would be required to produce such a record or summary.

(3) The Authority may not require the making available of sensitive data under paragraph (2), unless the processing of such data is indispensable for the proceeding and the absence of such data would frustrate the proceeding.

(4) In an administrative authority proceeding, the Authority may impound or seize records or databases containing personal data.

Representation

Section 18 (1) In proceedings instituted for violation of the principle of equal treatment and in particular in actions for the enforcement of personality rights, labour law actions, or actions concerning public service relationships, a non-governmental and representative organisation or the Authority may act as representative on the basis of an authorisation granted by the aggrieved party, unless otherwise provided in an Act. A non-governmental and representative organisation shall provide proof of its right to represent by submitting, as an original document or in a certified copy, its articles of association or deed of foundation and an authorisation granted by the represented party in writing, provided that the organisation may be required to provide such proof pursuant to the Act on the general rules on electronic administration and trust services.

(2) In an authority proceeding instituted for the violation of the principle of equal treatment, an organisation referred to in paragraph (1) shall be entitled to parties' rights.

(3) If a violation of the principle of equal treatment, or the direct threat of it, was based on a characteristic specified in section 8 that constitutes an essential trait of an individual's personality, and the violation or the direct threat of it affects a larger but undefinable group of persons, an organisation referred to in paragraph (1) may institute a proceeding before the Authority.

Evidentiary rules

Section 19 (1) In a proceeding instituted for a violation of the principle of equal treatment, the aggrieved party or the person authorised to enforce claims in the public interest shall be required to demonstrate the likelihood that

a) the aggrieved person or group suffered a disadvantage or, when enforcing a claim in the public interest, there is a direct threat of such a disadvantage, and

b) the aggrieved person or group bore, in fact or as presumed by the investigated person, a characteristic specified in section 8 at the time of the violation.

(2) If the likelihood of the conditions specified in paragraph (1) is demonstrated, the other party shall be required to demonstrate that

a) the circumstances, the likelihood of which was demonstrated by the aggrieved party or the person authorised to enforce public interest claims, did not exist, or

b) it either observed the principle of equal treatment or was not required to observe that principle regarding the legal relationship concerned.

(3) The provisions laid down in paragraphs (1) to (2) shall not apply to criminal proceedings and infraction proceedings.

Enforcement of claims in the public interest

Section 20 (1) For violation of the principle of equal treatment, an action for the enforcement of personality rights, a labour law action, or an action concerning public service relationships may be brought in court by

a) a prosecutor,

b) the Authority,

c) a non-governmental and representative organisation,

if a violation of the principle of equal treatment, or the direct threat of it was based on a characteristic specified in section 8 that constitutes an essential trait of an individual's personality, and the violation or the direct threat of it affects a larger but undefinable group of persons.

(2) The Authority shall erase without delay all personal and sensitive data the processing of which is not indispensable for exercising its competence referred to in paragraph (1).
